A committee, composed of W. E. Washburn, E. K. Smith and W. J. McLean, waited on the council last night and secured a substantial guarantee for the day's sports. This guarantee is intended to be a sum with which to meet expenses in the event of unsatisfactory weather conditions.

DRILLING OPERATIONS IN GRATAN COULEE TO START AT ONCE; LOCAL COMPANY HAS OIL RIGHTS ON ADJOINING SECTIONS

Stock Placed on Market By Directors of Local Oil Company.

Citizens and residents of this district and those interested in Wainwright's development will be glad to learn that a local company composed of Wainwright businessmen has been formed with the object of drilling for oil, a few miles southwest of the town. The company is registered under the name of the Wainwright Oil & Gas Co., Limited, with an authorized capitalization of $200,000. Shares were placed on the market on Monday morning and have since found good sale among the citizens, and those who believe that Wainwright's prospects are bright.

The members of the company who are reliable local businessmen assure the STAR that it is their firm intention to start drilling operations immediately a reasonable number of shares are disposed of, and are now negotiating with several drillers with a view to obtaining a satisfactory contract. It is understood that the local company will drill on the section, adjoining property on which the Gratton Oil Co. will start operations in the next few days.

It is the intention of the company to secure the services of an oil expert, who will decide on the best location to start operations. This will be done at once. Certain localities have already been recommended, but members of the Wainwright company will make every effort to secure the best results for themselves and the different shareholders with whose money they are entrusted.

Surveys of land in this vicinity were made as early as 1888, when geologists sent out from Ottawa investigated prospects for oil and natural gas. Their reports, which can be seen at Ottawa, bear out what geologists and oil experts have since found. Chas. Taylor, an old timer in the west, who is well known here, made a survey of the Gratton Coulee territory last summer which listed six weeks, and it might be interesting to know that he has filed claims all along the Coulee. The leases owned by the Wainwright Oil & Gas Co. are held on lands immediately adjoining what Mr. Taylor is understood to have filed on.

Experienced oil drillers, whose knowledge of oil prospects is sometimes considered better than that of geologists, have expressed their opinion that what is being taken from the Dingman well near Calgary is too pure to indicate that the supply will prove constant. Drillers in that vicinity are inclined to believe that what is spouting from the southern wells has filtered through strata for a considerable distance. They state that the mother field is located farther north and east of the localities where oil has already been found to exist.

J. C. Shirley has been appointed local selling agent for the Wainwright Oil & Gas Co. The president of the company is G. H. Beaudry; Vice-Pres, W. E. Mills; Secy, Robert Hunter; Treas, E. K. Smith. The directors are, G. L. Hudson, E. N. C. Tanguay, A. E. Mills and V. E. Graham.

VIKING GAS WELL IS NOW BEING RUSHED BY NIGHT AND DAY

Viking Man Tells of Progress Being Made on Gas Well Being Drilled There.

J. W. Johnston, editor of the Viking News, was a visitor here yesterday between trains on business. Mr. Johnston states that the gas well four miles north of town, being drilled by the Edmonton Industrial Association has been sunk three hundred feet and satisfactory progress is being made.

Gas Engineer Brodie, of Edmonton, is in charge of the work and is there at present. The work was held up a few days last week until a further supply of pipe was received. Two shifts are working night and day. Mr. Johnston states that people residing in Viking are very optimistic over the gas question and feel confident that it will be struck at no great depth.

NEW MANAGER IN CHARGE OF HOTEL

Mr. M. Connors, late of Edmonton, arrived here on Sunday to take over the management of the Wainwright Hotel.

Mr. Connors has purchased the interests of W. J. Bovard, who is leaving for Edmonton, where he has other interests.

Mr. Connors announces that he will make extensive alterations and improvements in the hotel and that he will aim to give fair treatment and satisfaction to all. He is a hotel man and kept a hotel in Belleville and Peterborough for eleven years.

While cutting a piece of meat about noon today, Mrs. H. Mott had the misfortune to severely cut her hand above the thumb. Medical assistance was necessary and about ten stitches were taken.

R. A. Snyder left here on Sunday for Minneapolis and points in North Dakota, where he will visit for a fortnight before returning here. He is absent on a business trip.

"Doug" Ferguson of the STAR staff was a week-end visitor to Edmonton to see his sister before she left for California, where she will reside in future.

Mr. and Mrs. Oliver J. Rogers have returned from a visit to Minnesota and points in Ontario. Mr. Rogers' friends will be glad to learn that his operation for appendicitis proved successful.

The last sewing bee in preparation for the bazaar to be held by the Ladies Aid of the Methodist Church was held at the home of Mrs. P. D. Laird, Fourth Ave., on Friday afternoon last. Quite a number were present and tea was served during the afternoon.

Allan Milner, a popular G. T. P. employee, left here yesterday for Winnipeg. From that city he will leave for Montreal and book passage to Liverpool on a visit to his old home in Yorkshire, Eng.

Land Blanketed for Miles North and South of Railroad.

A company, known as the Gratton Oil Co., Limited, has been incorporated and shares having a par value of $1.00 have been placed on the market. These started at 50 cents each and have found ready sale between here and Edmonton and in the city have been disposed of at a rapid rate. Those connected with the company state that more than 5,000 shares were sold in two days.

Land on which this company hold leases includes 32 and 33 in township 44 S. This is located in the Gratton Coulee, where investigations have been in progress during the past six months. The location of this land is about 3 miles south of the Battle River Bridge.

Between Chauvin and Viking hardly a quarter section of land remains that have not been filed on, and land has been blanketed that lies many miles north and south of the railway. The past two weeks have seen a great rush for leases at the Edmonton Land Office, and thousands of dollars have been paid in for leases on land in this and the Irma districts.

John Morris, who bought a gas franchise from the town at one time, is president of the Gratton Oil Co. One hundred and twenty-five thousand shares at a par value of $125,000 have been issued as fully paid up on the purchase price of the petroleum and natural gas rights owned or controlled by the Battle River Oil Co., Limited, in respect of the lands above mentioned.

Operations by the Gratton Oil Co. will be started inside four days, according to those connected with the company. It is not definitely known just where operations will start but it is thought that the drill and outfit will be set up on section 32. The outfit and machinery is on its way here at present.

The Edmonton Ad Club holds leases in the Gratton Coulee and those who should know state that Viking will not be the only place to be investigated. In fact it is said that the Ad Club has been advised to start operations in the Gratton Coulee at once, the claim being made that chances of gas and oil are more probable than near Viking.

FAMOUS AUTHOR VISITS ANIMALS IN BUFFALO PARK

Mr. Earnest Thompson-Seton and Maxwell Brown See Park for First Time.

Earnest Thompson-Seton, an author of wild animal stories, who is widely known all over this continent, visited the Buffalo Park here last week in company with Mr. Maxwell Graham, who is in charge of wild animal life in Canadian Parks. During their short visit, they were guests of Superintendent McTaggart by whom they were shown over the park.

Mr. Graham's trip west was made with the intention of locating an animal park for antelope, and it was decided that some part of southern Alberta would prove a great deal more suitable for these animals than this far north. The antelope that are now running wild in the province will be rounded up and preserved in the new park by the Dominion Government.

Mr. Thompson-Seton accompanied Mr. Graham on his trip to make a further study of wild animals, and the probability is that he will write a book on the animals now held in captivity in the west. Mr. Thompson-Seton's book entitled, "Wild Animals I Have Known" is well known throughout Canada.

AT THE ELITE

FRIDAY EVE, JUNE 12

A fascinating work of high artistry, "Judith of Bethulia," has a signal and imperative message and the technique displayed throughout an infinity of detail, embracing even the delicate film tinting and toning marks an encouraging step in the development of the new art. Ancient in story and settings, it is modern in penetrating interpretation—it is a vivid history of one phase of the time it concerns, and is redemptive as well as revelative, a lesson from one of those vital struggles that make and unmake nations as well as individuals, yet it is not without that inspiring influence that appeals powerful to human sense of justice.

The entire vigorous action of the play works up to the personal sacrifice of Judith of Bethulia, a perilous chance she takes for the sake of the lives and happiness of her people. She dares expose herself to overwhelming humiliation and dishonor in a change of beauty to strength, struggles through a conversion of sentiment that makes the high crisis more acute, and sets at defiance the "better-death-than-dishonor" platitude, escaping both through that all conquering combination in a woman, great physical beauty joined to lofty intelligence. She enters upon a relation of constant peril—only delicate treatment saves the situation at times—abandons her native purity of conduct and dares her own undoing, yet the noble end justifies the dangerous means and she emerges idolized by her people, an apotheosis of splendid womanhood.

A start has been made on the telephone line from here to Chauvin and poles are now being placed along First Avenue. The contract for the line was secured by Oscar Barnstead, of Holden. Poles on First Avenue are being placed at the outside of the boulevard.

COUNCIL DISCUSSED SYSTEMS WITH ENGINEER

Municipal Engineer from Calgary Made Suggestions at Last Night's Meeting.

Among other things considered at last night's meeting of the council was a system to do away with the surface water that still lies in small sloughs and pot holes in different parts of the town, and Mr. E. L. Miles, vice-president of the Galt Engineering Co., Ltd. of Winnipeg, Calgary and Vancouver, was present and discussed different schemes with the Mayor and Council. Nothing definite was decided on, although Mr. Miles made suggestions and a few recommendations as to what steps the town should take to drain the surface water. His verbal report after having looked over the situation dealt with a system of grades that would be permanent. The first drainage system would be installed at no great cost and established grades would serve for the future and for a city of thousands of people.

Mr. Miles recommended a permanent sewer pipe and thought that a mile of pipe would be necessary. Storm water could be drained into Bushy Head Lake and the cost of this drain would be about $7,000. Before leaving the meeting, Mr. Miles gave a brief outline of the experience his company has had throughout the west and assured the council that he would be able to give every satisfaction.

On motion of Council, Cook and seconded by Coun. Beaudry the Secretary was instructed to write the Galt Engineering Co. requesting cost of engineering work in connection with the various systems under consideration. The motion passed.

Geo. Murray appeared before the council and asked for a refund on pound fees he was obliged to pay as a result of his cattle being driven into town and impounded. After the circumstances were explained, the council decided to refund $8 to Mr. Murray, also to allow a rebate for pound fees to John Reid, whose cattle were impounded at the same time.

A committee from the July 1st. executive appeared before the council as well and asked to be protected to the extent of $250 in case of a deficit on that day. W. J. McLean, W. E. Washburn and E. K. Smith made up this committee and a motion was passed that the businessmen's committee be protected to the extent of $250 in case of any deficit sports day might show.

Dr. Little, Medical Health officer read a resolution from the Board of Health in regard to certain manure that had been piled at the rear of the livery barns, which, he thought should be removed to properly safeguard public health. The board of health was of the opinion that covering the manure with earth the premises could be made sanitary and Council, Cook and Mills were of this opinion. Coun. Beaudry thought that the Health Officers opinion should be final. It was decided to inspect the locality where the manure has been thrown and take such steps as were found necessary.

Tenders from W. A. Harris and H. Dowling for the supplying the town with gravel for streets were read, the first being for $1.20 per yard and Mr. Dowling's being for $1.15. The tenders were referred to the Public Works Committee.

COMPETITION FOR MUSSON SWORD IS PROVING KEEN

Empire Concert on Friday Night Promises to be Interesting Affair.

The competition for the Musson Sword will be one of the most interesting items on the programme at the Musical Concert to be held in the Elite Theatre Friday night. Eight officers will compete and all are ambitious to carry off the prize. The sword has been donated by Mrs. A. E. Mills to the officer handling his company in the best manner. Seating accommodation in the theatre has been increased and it is expected that a large number of out-of-town people will attend. The Edgerton Cadets are taking part and will arrive in Wainwright on Thursday night leaving here on Saturday morning. Programs are displayed about town in prominent places and it is agreed that the concert should prove one of the most interesting ever witnessed here.

The annual inspection of the Cadets will take place at 2:30 Friday afternoon at the school grounds. Major Outbit, of Calgary, inspector for Alberta cadets, will make the inspection and will likely attend the evening concert.

W. B. CRAWFORD IS STILL MISSING

Three weeks have passed and nothing definite has been heard of W. B. Crawford or his whereabouts. A rumour last week stated that he had been seen in British Columbia, but it was not confirmed by reliable information from any source.

A number of teams are at work in the local railway yards making excavation for a new sidetrack. The new spur will be built in the next few weeks.

Bad Disease

A well known railroad president once took occasion to visit a small southern town to enjoy the local fishing hole. He carefully concealed his identity and was consequently snubbed by a "fishing citizen" with whom he attempted to strike up a conversation on the banks of the stream. When leaving he secured the services of an aged black to carry his things from the hotel to the depot. There the departing visitor caught sight of the man who had given him the cold shoulder. "Poor Smith!" he said, smiling amiably and suffering from an aggravated attack of egotism. "But so!" said Uncle Silas in surprise, following his gaze. "He done lived here more'n twenty years an' Ah never knowed afore dat he wuz a fishin' man!"

Eleven miles southeast of London, in Kent, not many years ago were discovered the catacombs of the ancient druids, which are now much visited by sightseers and are lighted, for a part at least, by electric lights. Over fifty miles of chambers, cut in the chalk cliffs, have already been explored. The druids lived in these catacombs when attacked by their northern enemies, and until the death of many of their dead. The stone in which the human sacrifices were made is still to be seen, and also the well, from which water is drawn to this day.

"I'm afraid you don't understand our system of marking," D' means deficient, you know."

The Rising Frontier

It is not hard to keep from being second if you are only sufficiently in earnest about it. In an article in the "World's Magazine," Mr. Rudolph Savage Treacher tells the story of a German mountain climber who had not forgotten to be contented, even in the midst of deadly peril.

A party was crossing a glacier on the slope of Mont Blanc when one of the travellers called to the others to stop and listen. Strange cries came from the heights above.

"Someone has fallen into a crevasse!" exclaimed one of the party. This warning seemed to indicate that he was already beyond help.

"We must do what we can, in any case," responded one of the guides; and he began a long and perilous descent into what proved to be the bottom of a concealed crevasse. At the bottom they found the poor gentleman who had fallen. He was, however, quite unhurt, sitting comfortably upon a bench of ice.

"We've come to save you," said one of the guides.

"You save me?" answered the gentleman, quite tranquilly. "How do you know I want to be saved?"

"Because you called to us for aid," said one of the bewildered guides.

"Perhaps I did," replied the German, "perhaps I didn't. You came, anyhow. Now, what'll you take to rescue me?"

And before he would allow the guides to hitch him to the rope and lead him to the surface, he compelled them to set down in writing the exact amount they would require for the performance of their lifesaving duty. He was a business man, whatever anyone could say about him; and moreover, he knew the guides of Switzerland.

A Powerful Medicine.—The healing properties in six essential oils are concentrated in every bottle of Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil, forming one of the most beneficial liniments ever offered to the use of a curious remedy, can testify as to its power in alleviating pain, and many thousands more can testify that it is the most powerful of its kind. Art Critics.—When Orchardson's picture, "Hard Hit," was exhibited at the Academy the artist was strolling through the rooms one day when he saw, to his alarm, an excited little foreigner making toward him with threatening aspect and brandishing a stick as he came.

"Ah, sir," he exclaimed, "I thought that by killing you I could paint a picture like that I would crash your skull last instant!"

Charles's start
The public started last night at the little boy in the street. Something about his appearance arrested her. She stared at him in a near sighted way.

"Little boy, haven't you any home?"

"No, yes, I've got a home."

"And you're staying?"

"Yes."

"I'm afraid you don't know what you're saying. Do your parents look after your moral welfare?"

"Yes."

"And you're bringing us up to be a good and helpful son?"

One afternoon the bookkeeper employed by a certain concern bulged into the post office and timidly approached the desk of the postmaster.

"Mr. Jinks," said he, after some hesitations, "during the past week have been doing the clerk's work as well as my own, and this being pay day, I thought I would remind you of that fact."

"Let me," responded the boss, then, "figure it out you make half a week for yourself and half a week for the clerk. I will tell the cashier to fit the amount at $7.50."

Our Secret Service
No country spends as little on its secret service as Great Britain. The total sum amounts to about £40,000 a year. This is because we do not have the same kind of secret service, employ professional spies. The British secret service is controlled by the intelligence department of the admiralty and the war office. They never specially send out agents to act as spies, writes "The Outlook." In the don Messaline. It is a man sends in his own reports, and is not paid about the army or navy of a foreign power, he is rewarded according to the value only of his spy. As a general rule, however, British spying is confined to young naval and military officers who, during a private holiday visit to a foreign country, obtain secrets which they communicate to headquarters, solely from a patriotic standpoint and of course with the hope that their zeal will be rewarded by a promotion in the service. They are not even paid their true fees.

One slight young British officer in London—obviously I cannot mention names in official circles—received a letter from a man in Brussels, stating that he had some important military information to communicate, and that he did not attach very much importance to the letter, but as he had already assured the man of a building in Brussels, he decided, more out of curiosity than anything else, to see the writer, and was accordingly invited to his apartment. The man was a Frenchman, and an appointment was made. The officer crossed to the continent, and the man outside a well-known cafe.

"I cannot tell you all I know now," said the stranger, "but I have a bundle of papers from Lis pocket book in these secret documents and see me next Monday." The British officer took the papers and walked away into the arms of two detectives. He was then trapped. Protection of innocence were of no avail, and he was sent to prison.

The U.S. Press on Panama Tolls
Out of 155 leading newspapers of the United States on the World's Exchange list, we find 107 supporting President Wilson and only twenty-eight opposing him. We believe that this cleavage of newspaper sentiment is fairly representative of the cleavage of popular sentiment. The latter sentiment shows that the east, the middle west, and the south are overwhelmingly in favor of the Panama canal, while the breaking treaties, and that the chief measure of support comes from the Pacific coast.—New York World.

To Restore Garden of Eden
Late between the Euphrates and the Tigris rivers in Iraq, a desert where once was fertility so abundant that it passed into a proverb; Mesopotamia was called "between the rivers," as the name may be translated, was the original home of the human race. Since the time of the fall of the great Babylonian empire, and its counterpart, the Dili, are still traceable. The ruins of the city of Babylon, the fields of grain, two thousand years ago. But these and other great ruins, a few of which are still visible in the shifting sands long centuries since. Recently, says the May issue of McClure's Magazine, an eminent English engineer, the Turkish government has started a dam, or barrage, across the Euphrates, 15 miles above Babylon, as the first step in a modern scheme of irrigation.

A Man's Example
The uplifting influence of a righteous man is limited only by the energy of his mind and the righteousness of his life. He ought therefore to strive day and night to increase the powers of his intellect and to maintain a conspicuously wholesome character. Then, by the example of his unimpaired, he will restrain the wicked in their iniquities, and encourage the righteous in their rectitude.

Such men, whether little or great, are a real help to many lives; and if they are strong and capable by nature, they may become a substantial blessing to the whole of 5 great people or even to the whole world.

It should therefore be our ambition to live that men may know of us that we are inspired by a nobler spirit than that which actuates most of mankind, and that we are actually making earnest efforts to raise the moral standards of the entire human race.

The degrading influence of a bad man is limited only by his power and disposition to devise tempting evil. If such a man is weak and stupid, still the harm he can do is great concern to all good people, and they will ever be anxious to suppress it; or, on the contrary, he is a brilliant man, with attractive manner, the injury he can do to public morals is incalculable, and every effort should be made to render his baneful influence as harmless as possible.

If you have been buying the 3 lb. dollar tin of any brand of tea you have surely wished for a finer-flavored, richer, stronger tea.

The Green Label tin of Red Rose Tea will meet your wishes exactly. Besides, it will prove a cheaper tea because it goes farther, making about 800 cups. And it only costs $1.20 for the 3 lb. tin.

A TERRIBLE DISASTER IN OUR OWN WATERS.

CANADA STANDS SPEECHLESS WITH HORROR over the terrible catastrophe in the St. Lawrence last week, when the Empress of Ireland went down with a loss of 1032 human beings. In many ways the disaster is more terrible than the sinking of the Titanic, and this impression is emphasized when it is considered that the liner went down before it had reached the ocean and in only 20 fathoms of water.

The loss of the Empress and her cargo of human freight touches the heart of every Canadian for her passenger list was composed of more than 800 Canadians, near and dear to friends and relatives who now mourn their loss. The west figures prominently in the death list and Alberta has lost dozens of good citizens through this terrible disaster.

The loss of the Titanic prepared the world for similar disasters, for before that time it was thought that modern ocean liners were unsinkable. It is this and the sinking of the Empress that will tend to make ocean traffic lighter and go a long way towards discouraging emigrants from embarking on the voyage across the sea.

Canada's government will now make an endeavor to improve on the St. Lawrence route, although dense fog would not appear to be responsible to negligence on the part of the government.

DRILLING OPERATIONS HERE WILL TEST A NEW FIELD

THE ANNOUNCEMENT THAT OPERATIONS will be started within thirty days to drill for oil west of town has created a big stir locally, and when something more definite is known the excitement is liable to become much greater. Experts who have explored the country west of here are confident that prospects are as good, if not better, than what the fields near Calgary have shown. Indications are not lacking and experienced oil men who have made special trips over this part of the country are of the opinion that oil will be found at a depth below the surface, much less than anywhere in the entire province.

Local people, for reasons they have of their own from what they have seen and been told, believe that the Wainwright oil fields will show surprising things and that it will only be a matter of time before drilling operations will prove what they have long contended.

Experts, who, in the majority of cases, are interested, are of the opinion that the entire province is underlaid with rich deposits of oil and gas. Operations in this vicinity will go a long way towards bearing out, or disproving this, so far as eastern Alberta is concerned. The southern portion of the province has been tested and oil and gas are known to exist in the north country. Drilling operations in this locality will then test an entirely new field and satisfy those who have pinned their faith to what geologists and experts have expressed.

The town of Wainwright will get a great deal for nothing, in view of what was planned sometime ago in connection with drilling for gas. This knowledge, however, will only be secondary in importance if oil is discovered.

REMARKABLE PROGRESS IN ALL LINES OF ENDEAVOR.

"WESTERN CANADA IS ON THE THRESHOLD of an era of agricultural development along agricultural, industrial and commercial lines that will eclipse anything the world has ever witnessed", is a sentence to which people of this province should attach more than passing importance, and when it was spoken by W. J. Magrath, president of the Edmonton Industrial Association, a statement was made that expresses briefly the development of this province at the present time.

"We are making remarkable progress in all lines of endeavor and to successfully distribute this enormous wealth and derive the greatest benefit, it will be necessary to build more railroads, develop water transportation and power transmission facilities and establish more factories and mills. This will create more markets, and the direct result will be mixed farming the real source of wealth.

"Comparing the province of Alberta with the older provinces of the Dominion, the states of the Union, or with the countries of western Europe, there is no question that between agriculture and manufacturing it has the potential capacity to sustain 100 inhabitants to the square mile, which would mean a population of 25,000,000. Populated as densely as Massachusetts, our province would have 120,000,000 inhabitants in cities, towns and country. The present population of all Canada is less than 8,500,000; Alberta has about 435,000.

"Alberta has within its boundaries fully 100,000,000 acres of fertile lands available for settlement. This is exclusive of about 1,520,000 acres occupied by lakes, rivers and creeks, and 60,000,000 acres of mountains, hills and other lands not suitable for agriculture at present. We had under cultivation last year 2,799,267 acres, no less than 3 per cent of the available farming area, and from this our farmers produced 76,575,632 bushels of grain in addition to live stock, hay, roots, vegetables and dairy products having a farm value of between $15,000,000 and 20,000,000. The increase in acreage of 1913 over 1912 was 407,415 and the crop increase was 9,331,140 bushels."

This information coming as it does from one of Alberta's most prominent publicity men can be relied on, and goes to show the remarkable progress that is taking place in this province.

CHAPTER I.

There was a slight girl with no other claim to beauty, and yet, it is a fact that every one who saw her turned round to look at her again. What was her charm? The little face had delicate features, the eyes were large and soft, the mouth sweet and sensitive, but it was the beating joy which animated each small feature which seemed to speak through her ready, loving eyes, and yet again through her springing step, which caused the people of Worthington-on-the-Hill to give her the title of "The Girl With the Happy Face."

Little Barbara Chance had no particular reason for this supernatural happiness, which seemed to radiate upon her, and caused delight in every company, where she was found in every circumstance in which she found herself placed. Barbara was a motherless girl and lived alone with her father in the Rectory at Worthington-on-the-Hill. She was the light and joy and comfort of his heart, and of course she had friends all over the little sequestered place. The girls loved her, the women loved her; the old ladies and old gentlemen loved her; it was, in fact, a case of not being able to help but love her. She was once heard to say, when in the presence of a very beautiful girl and her greatest friend, in reply to a remark by a cantankerous old lady—the remark was this—

"I wonder you are not jealous of Margot Fenwick!"

Barbara raised her heavily fringed and astonished eyes, and said, "I don't quite understand," she said, "I think jealousy has been left out of me. I could not be jealous of anyone, far less the girl I love the best."

Perhaps, if the truth were known, Margot had more cause to be jealous of Barbara than she had of her, for although Margot had many lovers, there was but one man whom she truly loved, and that man, her father, she loved as dearly as she could. It was to this girl, in the heyday of her joyous youth, that a great, a terrible calamity came, the full extent of which she was not to know except by slow degrees. It first began, the first little shadow of the cloud on her clear blue sky, by the departure of Ralph Osborne on his travels. He was going to shoot big game in India and elsewhere, and he saw Barbara for a few minutes only on the evening before his departure.

Ralph's father, Admiral Osborne, had died a few months ago; the young man was motherless and an only child. He was left exceedingly well off, and he came to Barbara, she gloaming to put a question to her and to demand an answer.

"I'm going away for a year, Baba," he said, "and when I come back—here he looked into her bright, sweet face, which had pale with sorrow at his words—"I want it to be for ever."

"For ever, Ralph?" replied Barbara; she was trembling and trying hard to conceal her trembling.

"Yes," he replied, "I want the girl with the happy face to be my happy wife. Darling, you must know how devotedly I love you."

She did not answer, except by slipping her little hand into his. He folded it tightly in his arm and drew her to him and kissed her and looked into her eyes.

"Barbara," he said again, "you must promise, I must go away with your promise in my heart. Don't refuse me, little girl."

Then she looked at him and said: "I love you; I have always loved you; I shall never love anyone in the world as I love you. But Ralph, my father, my dear father, is old and tired and sad, and while he lives I cannot leave him."

"Barbara, you surely do not mean that?"

"It is true," replied the girl. "He has no one but me, no one, and even for you I cannot leave him."

A frown passed over Barbara's brow; for a moment he felt almost angry. "But you cannot give up your young life to the old," he said, "it is the law of nature that the young should make each with the other. I will speak to the doctor myself. I am certain he will not object."

She said her hand on his arm. "No, Ralph, you must not say any thing about it. My dear father is most unselfish and he would let me go, of course, but it is I who will not leave him."

They argued the point for some time in the end Ralph said that he would not come back from India until the end of the year, and that he would write to her, and when he was home he would try to arrange that arrangements might be made which would enable her to keep both father and husband.

Then she kissed him, and he kissed her over and over again and promised as faithfully as he was able to be true to her and to come to her at once in any difficulty. Thus they parted—and this was the first cloud in the happy sky of Barbara Chance.

The parting between Ralph and Barbara took place in August, and it was in the following November, early in the month, that the second blow fell upon the little girl.

She had often remarked with wonder at an undefined sadness about her father, the Reverend and much-loved Humphrey Chance. He tried his best to conceal it in her presence, but for a man who was not fifty his hair was too white, there was too much of a stoop between his shoulders, and he walked with too feeble a step. He did his utmost to keep his growing weakness and his sadness about him, and he was not a little surprised when, after Ralph's departure, he found many strange ailments of anxiety about his father.

One day, about the third or fourth of November, Barbara dashed in—these girls could never be so late to walk into her father's presence. She was bearing a pile of letters, which had just come by the post. The doctor was seated in the library, where his bright fire was burning. It was a somewhat chilly day, and he had a high waistcoat of oak and above the oak paper with a pattern of great bunches of roses. He had just defeated the paper and once or twice said coaxingly to her father:

"But the doctor always shook his head and said: 'My dear girl, you must not have your dear room decorated.'"

On this occasion Barbara brought in the letters, said in her gay, clear voice, "I have just had a letter from your father, and then ran out to the garden to pick some fresh flowers, which I have brought you. He has decorated the room with his father's favorite and said: 'My dear girl, you must not have your dear room decorated.'"

But the doctor always shook his head and said: "My dear girl, you must not have your dear room decorated."

Apples Can Be Grown

Dominion Horticulturist Says Prairie
Will Produce Variety

I believe that there are great openings on the prairie for market gardening in supplying the cities and towns with vegetables. The difficulty is that those who are interested in that line have largely gone to the provinces, but the need is just as great in this province for fresh vegetables, which can be grown just as well here as anywhere else in the Dominion.

This is the opinion of W. T. Macdonald, Dominion horticulturist, who has been visiting the western experimental farms, and is staying at the Royal Alexandra. Mr. Macdonald took an optimistic view of conditions as to horticulture throughout the West. When asked about fruit-growing on the prairie, and the oft-expressed view that tree fruit cannot be grown on the prairie, Mr. Macdonald said that the fact that grapes could be grown so successfully was proof that fruit trees could be cultivated. In his tour of the west, Mr. Macdonald found that fruit trees had been planted in the winter months, and that the trees were doing well. He said that the trees would have a better chance of survival in the prairie provinces. He said that the trouble had been that there had been so few interested in fruit trees. The people often did not want to grow fruit trees, but he mentioned the fact that A. B. Stevenson, Dominion horticulturist, had visited large quantities of apples, which showed that they could be grown.
